WICHITA MARKETS.

Receipts of Live Stock at the Union Stock Yards for 24 hours-75 cattle, 800 hogs. Shipments 141 cattle. The receipts of cattle were very small and the market was weak and inactive. Only a few cattle changed hands. Eastern markets dull and lower, and this had a discouraging effect on the buyers here. Handy butchers grade seem to be the best sellers. The supply of hogs seem to be running light this week. Today's market averaged a little stronger than yesterday's as a larger per cent of the hogs sold at $3.45 and several loads at $3.47 1-2. The close was steady.

Sir John Millale is universally conceded to have the finest studio in all London. It is situated at Palace Gate, Kensington. The house was built for himself. It is of the Italian order of architecture, and is constructed of red brick, ornamented with massive pillars and balconies of white stone. When you enter the very large hall you pass almost unthinkingly over the beautiful payement of colored marbles arranged in mostic, so much is the eye attreated by the screen of marble communs that shuts off the broad stone staircase, but not so completely hades the stair but that the visitor looks on to the first broad landing beyond the columns, and sees there a white murble fountain, its base surrounded by pulms, throwing up its per-fumed water high into the sunshine that streams through the window behind.

The studio takes up nearly the whole first floor. It is 49 feet long and 25 feet wide. The height is 23 feet, the walls being painted a rich Venetian red, but that is almost concessed by tapestry hangings. There is a polished oak dade running all around the bottom of the walls of the room and pllasters of the same wood separate it off into panels. There are two long windows from the ground to the celling to admit the valued "north light," and another facing the marble mantelpiece, which is of the most superb marble, exquisitely corved.—Cor. Phila-

Captured Through His Sweetheart. absconded with $38,000 belonging to his em-ployer was captured after some novel de-tective work. He had a streetheart in Michigan, and the detective engaged in looking assistant to proceed to Michigan and make the acquaintance of the girl. The assistant, finding that the young wo-man's people kept a boarding house, en-fliritation with the girl. She became very much smitten with the new comar, and during one of their chats together he en-tered into a glowing account of his travels, and wandered around until he finally men-tioned Kansas City and several acquaint

She blushed at the mention of the name, and the detective interpreted this as meaning that she was still corresponding with the rascally clerk. He continued to pay the lady marked attention, and at length learned that she was corresponding with a man named Phompson, in Chicago. This intelligence being communicated to the chief detective, another assistant was dispatched to hunt up Thompson, who was found, and turned out to be the man want ed. He was arrested and all but $250 of the stolen money recovered .- Philadelphia

Goats in Central Park.

The Harlem goat is another despoiler of the Park. He loves to browse on the shrubbery in the region of Ninstieth street. When caught he is impounded, and the years the redemption fee for goats was only 22, but that was paid with so much cheer fulness that the price was doubled. The Harlem goat is a wily and observant creature. He knows a peliceman's uniform afar off, and at sight of a graycoat between the trees bastily leaps from the par-ticular knoll that he is despoiling and scuttles out of the Park. At the approach of other human beings he placidly browses on. The tradition that the goat can detect a policeman in citizen's dress is an undeserved tribute to the brute's intelligence. Now and then, when a graycoat detects a herd of goats fattening upon the herbage, he calls his follows and a systematic gost hunt begins. The animals are surrounded so that all avenues of escape are cut off, and the whole herd is taken to the pound. The result is wailing among the rocks of Shantytown and a sudden enrichment of the city treasury .- New York Star.

A Seminole Reporter. A half breed Seminole has come from New Orleans to Pittsburg in a small paper cance. John Ryegrass is the English translation of this Indian's unpronounceable name. Mr. Ryegrass is tall and well formed, with the small hands and feet which Lord Byron says are the sure exemplant of able hearts. plars of noble descent. Ryegrass was born at Taliahatchie, Fla., but was taken by Father Burger, a Jesuit priest, to the New Orleans unifersity at the age of 10 years He seems to be fairly educated, and states that his ambition is to become a newspaper reporter. He will proceed up the Alle-gheny as far as it is navigable, and then return and transport his cance to Lake Erie. John Ryegrass has written several articles for The New Orleans Picayune and other southern papers.-Pittsburg Dis-

A Faithful-Dog. Mr. J. A. Thompson, of Banger, has a small dog which he believes to be possessed of more than the average of camine intelligence. He is also the owner of a cow, of which the dog is a fact friend. The cow was sick and Mr. Thompson stopped giving her grain for a time.
The dog evidently did not understand the reason for this deprivation, and con-cluded to attend to her wants bimself, for one day when their owner went into the stable he found the dog in the very sot of supplying the cow with mest from the bar-rel where it was kept by taking all he could carry in his mouth and leaving it in a box in front of the cow, who eagerly de-voured the much missed food.—Lewisten

ALL AROUND THE HOUSE. Nicely in the Home Laundry. Among the most particular of operations during house cleaning time is that of washing the lace curtains. Of course it is advisable to bave it done by a professional clea but, as in many cases they must be washed at home, the following practical directions from

Good Housekeeping are of interest: Take down the curtains carefully, shake them briskly to scatter the dust which clings to the upper folds. Have ready wash tube nearly filled with cold water-a tub for each pair of curtains. If taken down in the morning, let them soak till the next morning be fore disturbing them, then press not wring -the water out of them. If they still appear very dingy, add frush water; for if they are very much solled it will take repeated soakthem fit for washing. If there are careful washers they can then be put into the regular wash, and be gently present and rubbed with the hands, then boiled or scalded.

Let them dry before searching, and, if torn, mend them. Ese clear starch and let it be well boiled. They must be made rather lim-ber than stiff, and, should not stand out in lace like characteristics. After starching hang them carefully over the line, but not at as to stretch them. They should remain on the line till a little more than half dry. In tain) spread out and tacked on the floor or pinned on the carpet, being careful, if on the latter, to leave no wrinking in the sheet.
